THE GREAT SQUADRON NICKNAME PURGE

In the past few years the Wing has witnessed an attempt at professionalism striking at the very heart of the cadet way of life: changing squadron nicknames. For too long the cadet squadrons labored unaware that they could never realize their full potential until their nickname became more professional. Now set free from the burden of suggestive, lewd, and negative nicknames, the cadets are happier now than ever before. But not happy enough. In the midst of what appears to be a slump in the "squadron patch purge," DODO unearths a number of squadron nicknames still not reflecting favorably on the Cadet Wing, the Air Force Academy, and the United States Air Force...
