From the Editors:

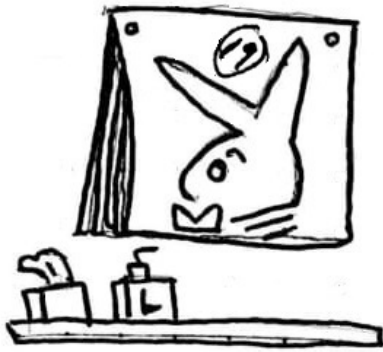

Welcome back cadets and cadettes to what I'm sure will be another year of furious backpedaling in the name of progress here at our beloved Zoo. Unless this virus isn't a Chinese hoax after all and we all get sent home—which would certainly be peddling in the right direction. But to hell with backpedaling, we're here to put our best foot forward, even if it's in the wrong direction.

We here at the Dodo hope to resurrect an old cadet outlet for putting on paper the thoughts we all have, (because we all know your roommate is tired of hearing you complain) This is a cadet publication for cadets. As much as we love to laugh at our own jokes, we want to hear from the Wing. If you have any ideas for next month's issue, send them to usafa.dodo@gmail.com. Your information will be kept anonymous.

In this undertaking, we truly want to honor the traditions and history of the sky-loving host of brave men and women that have come before us, while looking to the wild sky that lies beyond.

Welcome back
Wing!

WORD ON THE STRIPS

By Centurion

The US Air Force announced publicly this Thursday that there will be yet another change to its public image this year. This past May, the Air-Head Honchos approved a new version to the Air Force song, a version which removes male references in order to be more inclusive of the Air-women who have contributed, and continue to contribute to air-power. This new change--announced just three months later--has been under development for some months now.

The Dignity and Respect Ramp, formerly the Core Values Ramp, formerly the Bring Me Men Ramp, will be getting a new name--and some new signage. After 17 years of displaying the Air Force Core Values--Integrity, Service, and Excellence, the ramp will now display the new motto of the 66-year-old institution.

"In the same way that we felt that the Air Force song didn't represent the makeup of the Air Force, we feel that the core values just don't represent the cadets that are being appointed today," stated one air-official.

This statement comes just after yet another academy honor scandal gripped the nation.

1. Eating around the moldy parts of my quarantine beef sandwich
 2. Time travel through sleep
 3. Yoga - who knew downward dog would relieve my intense desire to transfer to ASU
 4. Taking mirror selfies and deleting them immediately
 5. Watching people walk free on the TZO
 6. Living on 1000 calories a day
 7. Commenting on the Comma's Instagram posts with a throwaway account
 8. Striking out on Tinder with girls

9. Striking out on girls in ROM who I'll eventually see
10. Jumping out of bed to a new text only to realize it's only DogHaus with a new deal
11. Missing the DogHaus penny pitcher with burger deal
12. Doodling
13. Touching my toes
14. Looking like a mean upper-classmen in the mirror - I am salty dog
