Dear Aunt Hazel,

Just a short note to let you know how much I appreciate your fabulous "gift for the executive." Every body agrees it is quite a status symbol, and have made such good comments that I thought you might like to hear some of them.

My young ho roommate remained unimpressed, saying it wasn't connected with the Air Force, but shrieked with delight when it hoovered over him and dropped a bowling ball on his foot. He wants to play with it again when he comes back from Fifty Simmons. The AOC, before it injected chloroform into his arm, said it couldn't be displayed as a trophy, no matter how cool I thought it was. I had to agree since it ground up my model and cut my girl's picture into 1.5763" squares.

It still runs perfectly, I think, but the instructions were a little nebulous on how to turn it off, and I can't hear my radio above it. My squadron commander is so interested that he wants to enshrine it with a monument across from the golf course entrance. Meantime, it just sits here running hot and cold rum, playing solitaire and reading Play dough.

I don't see how you think of such interesting and original gifts. But I don't think I have room for it's mate for my birthday. Thanks anyway.

Your nephew,
Wfasmc

P.S. The flight commander wants to know what the long red extension is that grabbed all his forms 10. So do I.

♫ Abilene, Abilene, prettiest girls I've ever seen.....♪
In unveiling this Panhandle Aphrodite,
19 year old Linda
Shelton, the DODO proves how very true the words of the song. For the 5'4" beauty, our first 1964 Space
mate, graces the McMurry College campus in Abilene. And when not framed in books and classrooms, the comely
platinum blond,
blue-eyed coed enjoys dancing, water skiing, and, of course, sports cars.
Enough introduction-- now all can enjoy the enchantment of Gerry Cockrell's bookshelf.

Rodden

Have you ever bothered to look around at the patches and insigniae we cadets have been sporting and will continue to wear until the millienum or until someone does something about it? Atrocious, aren't they? I mean, they don't turn me on. I mean they don't swing. See anything cool and neat about eagles, falcons, and dodos in 50 modified poses? Anything casual about lightning bolts and stars? And what happens when you slip into blue jeans and an A-jacket? Do your frinds snicker behind your back, make you buy the drinks, sneak off with your girl simply because your patch doesn't roar their motor?

NO MORE, FRIEND! The Dodo, in its never-ending search for truth and beauty, has come up with a whole new line of squadron patches, class crests, and bopping, groovy, all occasion seals guaranteed to shake up the guys, bring on the chicks, and rouse out the cops. We can't say yet when they'll be out. It's about the chain of command...

While most of us (Southerners notably) bundled ourselves in heavy overcoats, winter snow, and stalled cars during the waning days of the Christmas season, Falcon grid-ders Terry Isaacson and Joe Rodwell bathed in tropical sunshine, ringed themselves with swaying palms, leis, island music, and hula girls, and capped their brilliant gridiron careers with glowing performances in the 1964 Hula Bowl.

Terry, placed in the two roles which first launched him into the national spotlight, played almost the entire game as the South's defensive safety. The second role in which Terry starred on January 4 as he did throughout his sophomore year was that of halfback or running back and flanker back. Alternating in this offensive role with Duke's Jay Wilkinson and USC's Willie Brown, Terry caught three Don Trull passes and also threw the block that sprang Charlie Taylor of Arizona State loose for a 30-yard gallop and the South's first TD.

Joe saw less action than his teammate, but he made memorable those plays he did play. The big senior, playing mostly out of his familiar linebacker slot, nailed the North's Pete Liske (Penn State) behind the line of scrimmage twice on pass plays. Joe also slowed down Michigan State's flash, Sherman Lewis, and powerful Paul Warfield of Ohio State with bruising tackles.

To cap the day (at least at the stadium), the two Falcons teamed as Terry intercepted a North pass and Joe, hustling back from his linebacker position, cut down Northwestern's Chuck Logan to set Terry off on a long return.

ALOHA

The Falcon basketball team emerged from the holiday and immediate post holiday cage war with a 6-5 record, as they split six contests during that period. Highlighting the action was a runnerup finish in the Gator Bowl Basketball classic in Jacksonville. Johnny Judd three times led the Blue attack in scoring, while rookie Scott Etnyre filled the top scorer role twice and Rich Porter once.

Air Force 78	Florida State 53	Etnyre	26 points
Florida 74	Air Force 68	Judd	21 points
Houston 64	Air Force 63	Porter	16 points
Air Force 77	North Dakota 61	Etnyre	15 points
Utah State 83	Air Force 73	Judd	25 points
Air Force 76	Montana State 56	Judd	18 points

And then there was the inebriated fellow who was arrested for feeding the squirrels in the park. He was feeding them to the lions.

Every man has his wife, and the ice man has his pick.

The board members of the Cordial Catsup Company were wowed by the idea their ad agency had come up with for their billboard campaign. It showed a husband type seated before a delectable steak in a smart restaurant, and a pretty young waitress in a tight-fitting uniform was handing him a bottle of catsup.

"This is great," said the prexy of Cordial Catsup, "but remember, our appeal here is to housewives, so let's clean that title up a bit, 'What does she know about your husband that you don't know?' is too suggestive."

A week later the billboards were attracting attention all over the country with the caption: "He gets it downtown-- why not give it to him at home?"
